

A Princesses Fate

by CelestialFlames63

Category: Fairy Tail

Genre: Adventure, Romance

Language: English

Characters: Gray F., Lucy H., Natsu D.

Status: In-Progress

Published: 2016-04-15 07:03:47

Updated: 2016-04-16 07:24:19

Packaged: 2016-04-27 17:42:36

Rating: T

Chapters: 2

Words: 1,113

Publisher: www.fanfiction.net

Summary: Everyone knows the classic story. The knight in shining armor rushes in and saves the princess, and they live happily ever after. But, what happens when the dragon saves her first, steals her heart, and fights the knight to keep her? Read to find out ;) *I DO NOT OWN FAIRY TAIL*

1. Sent Away

_"Lucy my dear, I have news for you!" sang King Jude Heartfillia to his 7 year old daughter, Princess Lucy Heartfillia._

_"What is it father?" Lucy asked the king quizzically._

_"I have found your future husband! 11 years from now you shall be wed to Prince Gray Fullbuster, Heir to the throne of the Ice kingdom!" Jude announced excitedly._

_"Alright father, as you wish!" the young princess had said, eager to please her father._

_"Lucy was young and naive. She had not realized what these marriage plans had meant for her future, but she was excited to finally make her father happy. Her whole life, after her mother had passed away, had been alone. Jude had pretended that Lucy did not exist. Until today. Lucy was so happy..._"

_"But that means my little girl will need to leave our kingdom." Jude said to Lucy, trying to suppress a smile. "Now that you are important, you need to be protected. We will send you away to a tower in the outskirts of our Celestial kingdom. In those 11 years of your tower you will be completely alone. No chance of leaving, and no chance of disappointing me by leaving this deal. One day your prince will come and save you, uniting our kingdoms, and bringing you home to me. Stay strong my little Lucy, i will see you again one day." Jude declared as his assistants walked into the room, removing Lucy.

At this point Lucy was crying. The one time she made her father happy, he sent her away._

_Just like that, Lucy's life had been flipped upside down. Sent away to wait for a prince, someone she never met, a stranger, to come save her. Lucy's life was in his hands, but nobody expected a dragon to get involved._

**Thank you guys so much for reading guys!****

**This is my first Fanfiction, so sorry for any mistakes.****

**Should I continue this story?****

**Any ideas for improvement? ****

>Reviews are greatly appreciated!

**(^_^) ****

2. Chapter 2- The Boy on Fire

**Boy on Fire****

_Darkness. Followed by a plume of fire, and shards of ice. The air is hot with a stinging cold breeze. Screams sound from the distance. A boy with bright pink hair calls a Lucy's name, and a bay with raven hair lifts her. Then the world goes black again._

Lucy awoke with a start. The same dream had occurred last night. Every night Lucy lives the same nightmare, but when she wakes up she remembers nothing. It has been this way for 11 years, ever since her father had sealed her fate.

Soft purrs are heard next to the young girl. A cat, with fur as bright an orange as the sun, lay next to her. This feline is Loke, a stray cat who seems to have taken a liking to Lucy. Most nights he sneaks into her home after climbing vines that grew up her tower walls.

Loke was usually a good cat. He never destroyed Lucy's home, however he did eat her fresh food. Every week her father sends a care package. He never delivers it himself, but sends Lucy's old maid Aries. Aries is a sweet girl with pink hair, and is the only other human Lucy has seen in what feels like forever. Lucy has come to enjoy Aries visits more than any other part of her week.

There was not much that Lucy remembered. She had faint memories of her parents. Her mother was a beautiful woman who died after getting very sick with an unknown disease. Her father was the opposite, I mean, he did send Lucy away after all. Lucy knew she was waiting for someone, but who? And why does she dread the day they arrive?

Slithering out of bed, Lucy glanced into her mirror. She had big brown eyes full of hope and wonder, and long golden hair that shined brighter than the stars. She was the spinning image of her mother.

After taking a long, hot shower, Lucy proceed to change into a neon pink halter top, and a black mini skirt to match. Lucy had made her clothing out of the magnificent dresses her father had sent her, preferring the feeling of the shorter, more casual clothes. Formal wasn't really her thing. When she was fully clothed, Lucy began her day by preparing herself a nice, hot breakfast.

* * *

>Food. Natsu could smell it from miles away. The thick scent of meat, freshly cooked. Mixed with the tangy scent of syrup, and the sweet scent of fresh pancakes. All mixed with a delicious scent that Natsu could not quite describe. The smells beckoned him forward, almost as if they were calling his name. Okay, he may have just been a little hungryâ€¦ He followed the glorious, mouthwatering scents to a tower in the middle of the woods. He whimpered slightly to himself. Who knew he would need to put work in for a snack, but it smelled too good to pass up. So, Natsu climbed. All the way to the top of the tower. He found no doors, but a window that lead into a dark room. He climbed in it (after breaking the window) and examined the room. There was a large bed, walls covered with mirrors, and paintings of star formations. The weirdest part was the ceiling had been replaced with tinted glass, so you could see outside but not inside.

Growing tired of the dark, Natsu flicked a small fire onto his fingers, lighting one up like a candle.

He then left the room through a door, leading him closer to the scent. In the next room, Natsu saw something better than food. His senses were clouded over by the standing form of a girl. With big brown eyes, the hair of gold, and curves in all the right places, Natsu saw the most beautiful girl he could imagine. She was better than any free food he could have ever gotten. All Natsu knew was that he wanted her to be his.

When the girl had turned her head, noticing Natsu, she had called out to him. Screaming something about him being on fire? He didn't know what she was talking about. She then lifted up something large and shinny, and smacked Natsu in the head with it, knocking him to the floor.

"What a great first impression.." Natsu mumbled as he fell, and when he hit the ground, he went out like a light.

* * *

>And chapter two is done! What do you guys think so far?

**Thank You for all the support you have given me already!**

**I look forward to writing more for you all.**

**Take care! (^-^)**

End
file.